JOB DETAILS
Job Title	Marcomms Manager HRC & Sustainability
Reports to	Head of Marketing
Band	Band 7
Department/Directorate	Strategy

JOB PURPOSE

- To develop and deliver marketing plans for the newly formed HealthTech Research Centre in sustainable technology (HRC) in line with the HRC strategy and operating plans. The postholder will be responsible for analysing the market, developing marketing channels and delivering marketing communications campaigns targeted at HealthTech development companies, partner organisations and funding organisations.
- Working with the Head of Marketing, COO of the HRC, clinical staff and the Director of Business Development, the post holder will conduct primary and secondary research that provides insights into the market for HealthTech research. They will use this information to help to shape our offering to potential business partners, to identify value propositions that inform marketing and communications campaigns.
- The post holder will work with colleagues in the HRC to plan marketing campaigns that support business development objectives. They will take the lead in planning all elements of the campaigns from identifying the target audience, defining the best channels, developing messaging and supporting delivery and evaluation.
- The post holder will also be responsible for the development and delivery of communications plans that support the Royal Devon's sustainability strategy increasing sustainable and pro-environmental behaviour amongst Trust staff through: communicating news and information, promoting sustainability initiatives, engaging with staff to encourage and facilitate the adoption of sustainable business practices into business as usual, and to develop productive networks across the Trust and further afield.
- A key requirement of the role will be the ability to write concise and accurate copy for brochures, advertising, information packs, press releases, websites and social media for a variety of audiences. They will also be familiar with all formats of social media and comfortable with using a CMS. Experience of design software and the design process would also be beneficial.
- The post holder will also be an integral part of the wider Communications, Engagement and Marketing team, providing leadership and guidance to the wider team on the application of marketing practice.
- This role is suited to a skilled marketing professional who is organised, creative, proactive and excited to make a real difference to the Trust, transforming our approach along the way.

KEY RESULT AREAS/PRINCIPAL DUTIES AND RESPONSIBILITIES

1. Strategic support

The Marketing Manager is responsible for supporting the HRC COO, the Royal Devon Head of Marketing and the Royal Devon Director of Business development in using the HRC and the Trust's existing marketing, communication and engagement channels in providing accurate, timely, clear, efficient, communications, ensuring all engagement activities are conducted using a range of recognised channels and methods.

Specifically:

- Leading the development, delivery and evaluation of marketing communication campaigns.
- Delivering timely updates on progress, capacity and outcomes
- Ensure a regular review of campaigns and make appropriate revisions based on performance and feedback.
- Horizon scan national and regional publications and social media and feed back into the organisation about schemes and initiatives to support service and quality improvement, connecting with people who can help support change
- Ensure all staff and stakeholders receive a positive and balanced view of the Trust and the HRC through delivery of a proactive and innovative approach to communications and marketing.
- Drive the continuous development of marketing communications channels, maximising the use of digital and social media technology so that all target audiences (incl staff) can interact positively with the HRC and Trust.
- Support the development of our Trust and HRCr brand through the identification and embedding of Trust values and behaviours in all aspects of operations/delivery/service provision.
- Respond to media issues and ensure effective relationships and the best usage of opportunities.
- Evaluate all marketing communication and engagement activities.
- Lead the development of creative ideas and campaigns which inspire and engage stakeholders.
- Develop partnership marketing and channels in line with the University of Exeter and the NIHR.

2. Marketing and communications planning

Developing comprehensive marketing and communications plans to support the unique requirements of the HRC and the Royal Devon sustainability programmes as they progress through their milestones/phases.

Specifically:

- Develop M&C plans which set out purpose, objectives, key messages, approach, segmented audiences, tactics, milestones and evaluation.
- Ensure the plans are in Trust templates and are developed using modern and appropriate evidence-based marketing and communications practices.
- Ensure M&C plans are inclusive and enable representative and wide engagement with interested bodies.
- Ensure sign off of all M&C plans and that the review and evaluation phases incorporate feedback from the key stakeholders and use feedback to continuously improve the approach.

3. Stakeholder relations and engagement

Support an effective marketing and communications programme with all stakeholders including external third parties, tech startups, other HRCs, partner organisations such as Health Innovation Network, NIHR, UoE, BRC as well as third parties related to sustainability and the Trust Green Plan such as suppliers and internal staff.

Specifically:

- Support communication and marketing with staff, services and potential business partners. Support the HRC and sustainability team members to ensure their feedback, expertise and insight is used to inform and develop our plans.
- Support appropriate communication and marketing; the Integrated Care System, key NHS organisations, partner organisations, HealthTech organisations and community/political representatives where appropriate.
- Support the promotion of public, patient and stakeholder engagement in the work of the Trust and the HRC and develop efficient forms of two-way communication throughout the healthcare organisation and beyond.
- Organise engagement activities and research to ensure the organisation understands the perceptions held by all target audiences. Think innovatively about engagement methods, recognising the learning from recent developments in technology and sustainability.
- Ensure a professional approach with medical and business teams /members of the public who contact the marketing team.
- Evaluate and plan targeted marketing and communications with stakeholders which meets the needs of the organisation.
- Maintain and protect the reputation of the NHS organisation by delivering high quality marketing and communications to external and internal stakeholders. Identify and promote opportunities to increase confidence in the Trust and to support desired positioning.
- Ensure that systems and processes are in place to ensure that the feedback from the clinical teams and candidates is valued and actioned by the organisation and opportunities are provided for the target audience to influence the marketing services they receive.

4. Public relations

- Ensure all communications and marketing aligns to the corporate communications and the HRC branding requirements.
- Ensure that in communicating we always take account of the diverse needs of our audience (for example, making sure we use clear language; recognising the needs of people whose first language is not English, or who are partially sighted).
- Deal with a range of highly complex and/or sensitive situations where a high level of communication is necessary, imparting such information in possible emotive atmospheres often against barriers to acceptance i.e. presenting information about market research and effective marketing to clinical teams who have their own sometimes alternate views.
- Support the Head of Marketing in ensuring our public relations and marketing activities enhance and protect the reputation of the Trust and wider NHS brand within the context of a communications and marketing strategy.
- Contributing towards the management and development of communications channels, including:
 - Website
 - Intranet
 - Social media
 - Newsletters
 - Partners
- Commission, research, write, edit, proof-read and co-ordinate internal and external publications, media materials, reports and presentations. This includes commissioning and project managing designers and printing companies in accordance with the Trust's purchasing policy as required.

- Work hard to ensure that the majority of marketing and communications are proactive, as opposed to reactive. This will involve skills in internal networking, identifying issues and escalating the requirement to respond as well as recommending and planning the approach taken.
- Contribute content on the Trust's public website to ensure information is up-to-date, relevant and easily accessible to all. Work with key user groups to develop and maintain content on the site.
- Plan and co-ordinate publicity and creative campaigns working, when necessary, with partner organisations such as the stakeholders, partnering organisations and Local Authorities.
- Oversee the production of a range of publications, both electronic and printed, including leaflets, newsletters and promotional materials. Ensure copy is appropriate and accessible for different audiences, and manage design and production processes to ensure materials are of a high standard.
- Create and manage innovative and creative marketing communications campaigns.

5. Media relations

To ensure that media activity, both proactive and reactive, supports the delivery of the marketing communications strategies and that media coverage accurately reflects activity.

- Support positive working relationships with key journalists.
- Advise and assist the HRC team, senior managers and clinicians on their approach to responding to media enquiries. Act as media spokesperson when required. Prepare, write, issue and record media releases and responses.
- Actively sell in media stories where possible to ensure maximum coverage and exposure.

6. Internal Communications

- Align all communications to existing internal communications channels
 - Support the wider teams in ensuring internal comms is relevant, timely, accessible and engaging
 - Build strong relationships with leaders at all levels within the Trust to gain active buy-in from staff for marketing communications objectives, and support these leaders in developing and implementing marketing communications plans
 - Provide professional marketing advice to Trust sub-committees and groups as required
- Ensure effectiveness of internal communications systems, including supporting the timely production/organisation of staff briefings, bulletins and newsletters

7. Event management

- Arranging and/or supporting staff in the planning and delivery of events, including the development and delivery of graphics (via our inhouse graphics team) and materials.
- Attending events to talk to candidates and gather first hand research.
- Think innovatively about alternative approaches to events, recognising learning from the pandemic.
